

Mari Swa:

Hello again. Thank you for being here with me once more. I hope you are very well today. I am Mari.

This information can be seen as science fiction or as the viewer sees best and I post it for entertainment purposes only. Still, I take my information very seriously, and for whoever has eyes to see.

At least in the material world, or solid existential realms, everything that exists has a value in mass representing how much matter an object has. This mass has a numerical value within the measuring context or media, for example grams, kilos, or pounds. But although it is an artificially fabricated measurement system, it still is and represents a valid way to measure an object or objects.

As mass is the amount of matter an object has, the amount of both is determined by the amount of gravity such object is receiving, remembering that for Taygetan science, mass is the result of a concentration point of gravity within a field, and not as seen on Earth, where it is the mass of an object which is said to generate its gravity.

Regardless of the measuring system and parameters, everything that exists and that has mass is represented with a numerical value, meaning that the whole universe we live in, within this material existential realm, has a numerical value within a field or an area, for example a region in space or a place on a planet. This means that everything is numbers and everything is interconnected, where any movement or displacement of mass and energy within the field ends up affecting and modifying the values of mass and energy of all the other objects in it.

This strongly backs up the so-called “Butterfly Effect”, which says that even a little harmless butterfly batting its wings somewhere in central Africa will cause a disturbance in the field, which will end up causing a chain reaction of events that affects the entire planet.

Although this is basically real from the point of view of Taygetan science, the butterfly is not the only living conscious organism batting wings within the existential field of Earth. Therefore, the reality experienced there is the result of a complicated soup of all the events, of all the consciousnesses batting their wings and affecting each other in one degree or another, and not only as the result of one particular butterfly, although it is still possible to trace a specific chain of events and effects to it if the circumstances are the right ones.

As everything that exists can be represented with numerical values of energy, mass, and movement, we can see why existential reality is considered to be a simulation, including the rising simulation theory on Earth because, as you can see, the very numerical existential matrix of reality works very similarly as it is depicted in the 1999 movies “The Matrix” and its sequels, which many critics consider to be a documentary disguised as a science fiction movie.

As explained before in my stellar navigation videos, a location within a field is characterized by the exact distribution of energy, mass, and movement values. This means that each place in the material world has its characteristics defined by how much mass and energy is located where within that field, and what relationships those objects have with all the other objects inside that location field, which in the end are all energetically connected as they are all the result of all the complicated dance of gravity, frequencies, and vibrations which are manifesting it all.

This means that any location is defined by the placement of the objects inside it and the relationship between them. Simply said, a place is defined by what is in it and where each thing is located in relation to the others, and it can be and is energetically represented by a map of numbers.

Existence in the material realms is never static, as objects are always moving from one place to another, mostly being moved by whoever has a strong connection to Source, although ultimately everything that exists is Source and has consciousness of its own and to its particular level. The set of numbers within a mathematical matrix is therefore always changing, as seen from the point of view and interpretation of an observer with connection to Source, who is interpreting reality as such through its consciousness and understanding, including the perception of time as a subproduct of the mere act of being aware. Similar to the mass-produced interior of some houses or the interior of mass-produced cars, they may look the same, yet the values within distance and location also serve to define one thing from another, even at a molecular level. Some locations in a place may look alike others.

When a portal appears in one or another place, it is because the mathematical values of mass and energy of one place suddenly match the one of another. You can see this as a product of chance, when the result of the ever-moving mathematical field suddenly brings up the same result in one place and another. The mathematical value of mass and energy of a place and the frequency and vibrations which are manifesting them coincide with the results of the mathematical dynamics of another location. A portal is opened, and it will stay open until the field's mathematical values of the places change enough to close it.

Some places may have a natural predisposition to favour the appearance of natural portals because the energy dynamics of such a place coincide a lot with the ones of the other location the portal connects with, to the point where if some other factors and conditions occur, then the portal will open. For example, during one or another strong astronomical event, such as an equinox or an eclipse. This is the basic theory of naturally occurring portals in simple, understandable terms.

Distance is an illusion, as so is time. They are both subproducts of the mere act of being conscious of being aware, of thinking, and of one's own existence. When a person's vibration, or the one of an object, is altered to match another location or circumstance, the experience of such a person will be that of the new circumstance. This is basic theory of manifestation principles, as well as basic Law of Mirrors, or Law of Attraction principles, and they apply to portals as well.

When you manifest a new life, altering your vibration with your thoughts, you are literally moving through a time and space portal which exists only in your perception towards another reality where what you want exists, although you don't always perceive it as a portal, but rather as a quantum jump where your new circumstances are drastically different from your initial ones.

The mathematics which control the material realms are ever-changing in a constant numerical dance, which is the result of the sum of all the consciousness within such a field and their frequency and vibrations, which are their thoughts and emotions. All this goes for time as well, as it is only another group of numerical factors which define a location. This means that as a portal can take you to another place, it can also transport you to another time. All that needs to happen is that the energy and vibrational numerical values of one location and time must coincide with those of the other. This happens naturally all the time, as the fabric of time and space is not perfect and is ever-changing.

And portals can be artificially created to transport anything inside its area of influence to another location and/or time. This, as I will explain in one of my next videos, is about artificial portals and how they work in detail.

This will be all for today. Thank you for watching my video and for liking, sharing, and subscribing for more, and I hope to see you here next time.

With much love.

Your friend,

Mari Swaruu

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xe1aMRYeKVc>